

UNDERSTANDING YOUR BUSINESS EXPOSURE

Some risks are obvious, like fire or bad weather. Others are not, like the potential for lost income due to property damage preventing you from quickly resuming your business operations. One thing is certain – while no one can eliminate risk, we can help you prepare for it.

Getting started

An important first step in your preparation should be assessing all of the possible risks to your business. Common industry risks are called out in the first column below – simply go over the list and check the boxes for the risks that are applicable to your business.

Next, review the risks you’ve identified. You can choose from a number of techniques to control or reduce your risks. For example, you could avoid those risks entirely by deciding not to undertake business endeavors that carry those risks, or you could reduce the risks by implementing preventative safety programs. Another option would be to set aside finances to cover your exposures or free up resources by buying insurance that would provide protection to cover them.

Once you’ve identified specific exposures, applicable coverages are listed in the right hand column for your review. These coverage options are general descriptions – subject to exclusions and conditions – so use this guide to discuss a coverage plan that addresses your business exposures with your agent.
